

Clothes Synergy

Clothes: These are the easiest to deal with. There are more than enough resources to clothe every homeless person in the valley. One company is currently collecting donations. They exploit the market without giving to the homeless. Most donation centers claim to put people to work. Well, so does Target and Walmart. They have very low production costs and sell as many clothes as the big box retailers. This is a for-profit business, not a 501c3.

We would hope they would want to help, but if not, they should contribute to stay a 501c3. All donation centers should be designated to provide enough clothes to support the homeless community including walk-ins. What is not used for the homeless, will be sold in their stores for a profit.

This is a similar problem to food; except they are not dealing with perishable items. There is more than enough for everybody to do well.
